Anthea is the Managing Director at Moore's Family Enterprise. She has previously worked in a family business advisory capacity for the last 10 years, most recently with Big 4 professional services firm KPMG and previously BDO.

Anthea is involved with the Family Firm Institute (FFI), the international organisation for professional Family Business advisers. She regularly attends courses and conferences, keeping herself updated with all the latest thought leadership and best practice that can be used to effectively advise families in business. She holds a FFI certificate – an international accreditation for Family Business advising and was the first Australian to do so.

Focussing on communication, education and collaboration via strategic planning and change management for family businesses, Anthea facilitates strategic planning and governance in family owned firms, undertakes succession planning and aids in the creation of an inclusive environment for non-family members.

Anthea assists in the development and implementation of tools that provide structure to improve decision-making, communication and family unity, such as Boards of Directors, Family Councils, Family Meetings and Retreats.

Anthea has been actively involved in the Australian family business community through membership of, and participation in, family business committees and conferences.
